SELECT POETRY.

SHOW ME THE WAY.

Show me the way that leads to the true life,
I do not care what tempests may assail me,
I shall be given courage for the strife,
I know my strength will not desert or fail me;
I know that I shall conquer in the fray:
Show me the way.

Show me the way up to a higher plane,
Where body shall be servant to the soul.
I do not care what tides of woe, or pain,
Across my life their angry waves may roll,
If I but reach the end I seek, some day;
Show me the way.

Show me the way, and let me bravely climb
Above vain grievings for unworthy treasures;
Above all sorrow that finds balm in time—
Above small triumphs, or belittling pleasures;
Up to those heights where these things seem child's play;
Show me the way.

Show me the way to that calm, perfect peace
Which springs from inward consciousness of right;
To where [illegible] shall cease,
And soul shall radiate with the spirit's light.
Though hard the journey and the strife, I pray
[illegible] the way.

HIS WIFE.

The sun had just set when I arrived at Somerset station. A whole mile to walk in the pleasantest part of the pleasantest country in the world! Soft hills, bathed in the sun's parting glow, dotted the landscape on every side, and over all smiled a tender, brooding sky. What keen enjoyment the anticipation of a summer all alone with my best friend had afforded me—and now I was almost there. There was the house; brown and many roomed, and most of the rooms on the ground floor. Grandmother herself had been the architect of the establishment.

'I told your grandfather,' said she, on one occasion, 'that no man was going to plan a house for me to live in. What does a man know, I should like to be told, of a woman's needs? If he'd built it according to his notion, there would have been three or four flights of stairs, and then, with a baby on each arm and two or three hanging to my petticoats, I might have spent most of my time on them, but I knew better!'

As events proved, grandmother was correct in her prediction. An enthusiastic lover of nature was this old lady of seventy years. Yes, there she was! I caught a glimpse of her white sleeve on the window sill. I would walk softly in and surprise her. How exquisite the taste of this presiding genius! Heliotrope, mignonette and white roses! Grandmother's rose bushes were the envy of the whole neighborhood. Shy little violets bordered the gravelled walk leading to the low door stone, and over beyond, in grandmother's pet field, millions of yellow-hearted daises nodded and beckoned to the soft evening breeze. Avoiding the treacherous pebbles, I cut quietly across to the front door, stealing with cat-like tread through the long narrow hallway, and entering the sitting room on my tip toes. Wonderful victory! Twice before had I tried this wonderful dodge, and each time had the old turkey gobbler betrayed me. Where was he on this occasion; and why, when I really need his services, did he not prove my friend? Softly, softly, only a step or two more. The sensation of the next minute wasn't anything to speak of; I mean by that it was indescribable. The back of grandmother's big arm chair quite hid the occupant, and, nothing doubting, I made with great dexterity for grandmother's eyes. I found the eyes, but they didn't belong to grandmother. I knew that before their saucy owner had imprisoned my hands.

'Who is it?' said he, like one first awakening from a sleep. 'Let me guess. The fingers are too little for Madge, and too long to belong to Sarah!'

I found my tongue then. I would not wrench my hands away. That would be rudeness; for he evidently supposed them the property of some intimate friend.

'Please release me,' I said; and then, as he rose quickly—apparently surprised by the voice of a stranger—I added, rather indiscreetly, I suppose, for the tall fellow in the shirt sleeves laughed right heartily, 'I thought you were grandmother!'

'Never was taken for an old lady before,' he answered, with provoking nonchalance; and then added, as he hastily threw on a dressing-gown, 'what do you think about it now?'

'I think I should like to know where grandmother is, and—'

'And what am I doing here?' he interrupted, with another laugh. 'Your grandmother has gone to spend the evening with a sick neighbor. I belong to the next house—or rather am visiting my sister. She was unexpectedly telegramed away, and as I have been ill, and am not quite well enough to take care of myself in the absence of a housekeeper, your blessed grandmother offered to look out for me until my sister's return. My name is David Alcott, and yours, I take it, is Miss Susan Ellis.' And then we shook hands.

That evening marked a new era in my life. I was comfortable, as was always the case at grandmother's and I was happy too—happier than I had ever been before. What it meant was of no sort of consequence to me then. I did not stop to analyze my emotions, but enjoyed to the utmost the strange entertainment fate had placed before me. Mr. Alcott showed where grandmother had left the strawberries after tea, and then I skimmed a pan of morning's milk, and proposed my supper.

'You have been to tea, of course?' I inquired of the gentleman, who had again taken up his book.

'Yes, but I should like a few strawberries, if you can spare me some.' So it chanced that he drew a chair up to the little round table, proving a most interesting companion.

In an hour or more after our little meal was over, I sat on the door-stone alone, watching for grandmother. Then he came to the door and said:

'You needn't expect her before nine o'clock. I wish I could go too with you.'

'And why not?' I asked.

'Because I am still in quarantine. [illegible]

[illegible]

ing to a table quite overlaid with books.

'Something of hers,' I replied, picking up an edition of Mrs. Browning.

'All right! now to please me, open at random, and I will read there.'

I laughingly assented, and placed my forefinger plump on Lord Walter's wife

"But why do you go?" said the lady, as both sat under the yew,
And her eyes were alive in their depths, as the kraken beneath the sea blue.
"Because I fear you," he answered; "because you are far too fair,
And able to strangle my soul in a mesh of your golden hair."

'Please don't go on,' I interrupted. 'I like the poem, but someway it isn't pleasant now.'

'Hardly appropriate,' he answered, closing the volume dreamily, and then added:

'I suppose you think Lord Walter's friend a fool?'

'He is the type of a large class; but, Mr. Alcott, are we not treading on dangerous ground? Do you know what has just happened?'

'Yes, [illegible] than that for me.'

'It takes a soul to move a body,' he repeated slowly. 'It takes a high-souled man to move the masses, even to a cleaner style. It takes the ideal to blow a hair's breadth of the dust to the actual. Ah! your Fouriers failed—because not poets enough to understand that life develops from within.'

'Never was truer words spoken than that, Miss Ellis—"from within!" It takes a soul to move the masses;' and, according to my observations, it makes very little difference to whom the soul belongs. Men of intellect never have subordinated women. See what excellent care Goethe takes of them. Look at Faust's Margaret, the instinctively pure child growing into a self reliant woman; and see how, as Wilhelm Meister develops, spiritually and intellectually, he comes naturally upon women of a purer and more innately refined type—first Mignon, then Natalie, afterwards Theresa and Macarie—the last a star soul.'

'I thought as much,' said grandmother, entering just here. 'I felt sure you had come when I saw the light;' and no pet last child, a baby, was ever more welcomed than I by my dear father's mother.

'You promised me, David you would certainly go to bed at 8 o'clock,' said the old lady, reproachfully, after having satisfied herself that I hadn't changed a bit since she last saw me.

'But how could I?,' he asked, with a comical gesture in my direction.

'Well, I hope you won't be any the worse for it to-morrow,' said she; 'and now to bed with you this minute!'

'Dear old Vagrant, good night,' said the gentleman, with a rare smile, obeying instantly; and pleasant dreams to you, Miss Ellis.'

'Nice boy that,' said grandmother, as the door closed.

'Boy?' I repeated.

'Yes, boy?'

'He is twenty-five years old if he is a day.'

'What of that? You are twenty, and what are you but a girl, I should inquire? Four days ago there didn't anybody around here think he'd ever get out again. The doctors gave him up, and his sister was almost crazy; but the fever turned, and he went to sleep and slept two days steadily, and when he woke up he was as bright as a button.'

I did not see my new friend for two days. He had over-excited himself, and the result was solitude for this length of time. I roamed the fields, and haunted the woods, rode, wrote and thought. I never did so much thinking in so short a space of time, with such unsatisfactory results.

'Where under the sun have you been all this afternoon?' said grandmother, as at sunset the second day, I dragged into the kitchen porch.

'Up a tree.'

'Up a tree?' this with considerable disdain in voice and manner.

'You have torn a great slit in your dress, Sue, and you look like a fright. I have wanted you—sech'n your worth—for the last three hours.'

'What are you making, grandmother?'

'Panada.'

'How many quarts of this stuff does your patient consume, Mrs. Ellis, in the course of twenty-four hours?'

'That is according to his appetite, Miss Saucebox,' said a rich voice at my elbow, and there stood Mr. Alcott.

'No. 2,' he continued, gravely.

'They've sent for me up at Jones. They think the baby is dying,' broke in grandmother, while I stood blushing like an embarrassed school girl.

'And I want you to keep house and take care of him while I go up a while and see if I can do anything to help them. When this panada gets a little his cold, Sue, put in two tablespoonsful of brandy—that's the bottle on the second shelf;' and the provoking old lady tripped away as unconcernedly as if it were the most commonplace thing in the world for a young lady to be left with the care of an invalid, and the said invalid a man and a stranger. A few minutes sufficed to place me entirely at my ease, and no veteran hospital nurse was ever more composedly executing than I in my new role. Grandmother's orders were explicit; David wasn't think of such a thing as reading aloud, and he must lie on the lounge in the sitting-room until she returned. Such an evening as that was! I read to him out of Auerbach—and this took us naturally to the Rhine—and then I found that my companion had travelled among all my favorite European cities. What wonderful pictures he drew me of the Campagna, the Colosseum and the Forum! How exquisite was the play of the moonlight on the Sabine Mountains, and how charmingly picturesque the sketch of the old Roman ramparts, in some places bare and black with age, with here and there patches of scarlet and green made of poppies and ivy.

Grandmother came all to soon. She never was unwelcome before. Six weeks of this dolce far niente life—and then

There is no good at this but love—but love!
Where else looks good to some shade flung from love—
Love gilds it, gives it worth.

I knew as well as the queen and poet Constance what there was in life worth [illegible]

[illegible]

'We'll have a good time to-day, Lorchen,' he said, as we made our preparations in the morning. 'I will take out my scrap-book, and when the others are engaged, and won't miss us, we'll wander off by ourselves, and enjoy after our own fashion—won't we, Lorchen!'

'Lorchen!' How that word thrilled me! and how it epitomized the tender purity of his regard for me!

Oh! day long to be remembered! Oh! day of heartache and agony indescribable!

Steep the soul in one pure love,
And it will last thee long.

What kind of a love was my soul steeped in? Aye! love has its wormwood and gall, as well as its honeyed sweetness.

A party of friends—David's friends—came down from the city, and as we were walking slowly into the grove they came upon us from the depot road. I had David's arm. It was my arm—I knew it—and we should walk that way forever. Greetings and introductions were over. Shall I ever forget the face of that man who gazed straight for my soul with his poisoned arrow? Walking up to David's side, with a contemptible familiarity, he said:

'Saw your wife last week, Dave.'

'Ah,' replied my companion, perfectly at his ease.

'Coming down on the 8 o'clock train, if possible.'

'Good,' replied David; and then followed inquiries about various friends, in a thoroughly cool and self-possessed manner. It seemed to me that my heart stopped beating. The hand on his arm involuntarily clenched itself, and there it remained until we arrived at headquarters, a little round bunch of cords and knuckles.

'You won't be gone long, Lorchen?' inquired David, as I moved away, ostensibly to help the committee of arrangements to decide where the tables should be set.

'What's that you call her?' my mortal enemy asked, inquisitively.

'Lorchen,' replied David.

'Why, that's a Dutch name, isn't it? I thought she looked like a foreigner.'

I heard no more, waited for no more, but watched my opportunity, and when sure that no eyes were upon me, struck the path leading to the road, and in less than an hour was home again in Grandmother Ellis' sitting room.

'Oh! grandmother! grandmother! What misery has your terrible indiscretion brought me!' I groaned aloud—for grandmother had gone away to spend the day. There at the foot of the lounge were his slippers—there on the back of the lolling chair his dressing-gown. I could not turn my eyes without beholding fresh evidences of his precious personality. What should I do? I could not leave until grandmother returned. Such a blow as that I felt sure the old lady would never rally from. I must suffer and keep it to myself, and get away at the earliest possible moment. In my agony I threw myself upon a lounge and buried my head in the pillow—the pillow upon which his head reclined so often—the head I had so foolishly called mine. After awhile tears relieved the heated brain, and I fell asleep. I dreamed that I was in the water. I could not stir. Huge waves threatened to submerge me. Just beyond on the bank, almost within speaking distance, stood David, a beautiful woman by his side—his wife!

'David! David! take hold of my hand! Don't you see I'm sinking?' I cried out in my terror. 'Wake up, Lorchen,' said a familiar voice at my side. Here are my hands, dear. They are both yours—not one, Lorchen, but both. Do you understand that?'

'But, David—but—'

'But what? Can it be that my little brown bird was scared home because of'

'Because of your wife,' I managed to say, with his face close to mine.

'It was my chum he meant, Lorchen! That's what we always call them at college. This is No. 2, little one. I wonder what next? I'll get a divorce from that fellow, dear, if you will promise to be my own real wife?'

And I did.

He made a Good Lawyer.

[By John Alden.]

"Yes, we need a good lad," said the old lawyer to a young applicant, "and I think you will suit. Who do you live with?"

"With my dear ma."

"What does she do?"

"Prays and takes in washing."

"Well, what would you do with your wages?"

"Give it to dear ma for the missionary cause."

"That's very good. What do you do evenings?"

"Oh, I read hymns and verses to dear ma."

"And on Sundays?"

"Attend Sunday School."

"Young man, if you should find a cent on the office floor what would you spend it for?"

"I would not spend it at all, for that would be sinful; I would restore it to its owner."

"When sent out on an errand would you stop to play marbles or wallop some boy?"

"No, sir, for ma says that playing marbles leads to gambling, and that our fists were never made to punch each other's eyes."

"Little boy, you are too fearfully and agonizingly good for the legal profession. You should step right back into the middle of the Sunday-school library book where you evidently came from. We will endeavor to wrestle with the stormy road before us without your help. You may retire."

"Don't want me?"

"No."

"Not at all?"

"No, sir. You were evidently made for preacher."

"Sure I wouldn't suit you?"

"Very!"

"Well, I'll go home and give the old woman fits! She stuck to it like a brick and made me learn all this guff. I know mighty well that you didn't want a Sunday [illegible] around the office, but she had her own way. Sorry, Boss; good bye."

"Hold on! So you're a real, live boy, after all?"

"I believe."

"Well, [illegible] Come to-morrow [illegible]. Four dollars a week. Now go."

[illegible]

Who Was Punished?

He wasn't such a bad man as men average, though he was not a hard worker and he didn't have a good husband's and father's interest in his family. What they wore and what they ate he earned, whether it was good or bad, and wife and children depended upon him. One day when he had been drinking he got into a row, stabbed one of the party and was taken to the station. There was not $2 worth of provisions in the house but there was a wife and five children, and while they wept over the fate which had overtaken husband and father their inner pulses at the thought of almost empty cupboard, their scant clothing and the rent overdue.

"He is a bad man and he must be punished," said the public.

"How?"

"We'll send him to State Prison for a year."

"And his family?"

The public shrugged its shoulders and made no reply.

That man was a bad man but his wife was a [illegible] woman and his children had innocent hearts. They were not to blame for the deeds of the father. Yes, the man must be punished, and he was punished. He was punished by a year in prison where he was well clothed, well fed, furnished with a good bed, attended by a doctor when necessary, and his work was but play to his strong muscles. Instead of feeling degraded he entered the prison with head erect and the firm conviction that he had vindicated his manhood by stabbing the fellow who had struck him. For a year he was better fed and better lodged than since he could remember and he gained flesh. This was he "punished" to come home and find himself a corner grocery hero and plantiguel men anxious to befriend him.

Now what of the family? Even before the husband was arraigned for trial the wife had to sell the best of her furniture. He was not yet sentenced when the children were sent out to beg. The day they "punished" the bad man by starting him to a comfortable prison his family were turned into the street and remained there all day and night. When they found a home in a hovel the children went begging for food and the mother for work. In a year exposure and suffering had consigned the mother and the three children to paupers graves and the other two had been sent among strangers to find homes. The "punished" man comes out fat and healthy to discover that he has only himself to look after, the law having kindly made vagrants and beggars of his family and then killed and buried the most of them.

"He's got such a dose as will make him behave himself in the future," says the public.

The "dose" is forty extra pounds of fat, a system cleansed of whisky and a more rugged look than he had carried for twenty years, having scarce enough interest to ask where his wife died and what had become of the children the law didn't kill and bury.

It is nothing if "law" breaks up homes and makes beggars and paupers and skeleton corpses by the half-dozen to punish one man over whose actions the sufferers had not the least control.

Law makers are wise men and we must admire their wisdom.—Detroit Free Press.

Early Marriages.

An exchange says: It seems to me that a great many boys—for what else are they at the age of twenty or even twenty-one?—are rushing into matrimony nowdays, depending entirely upon their small salaries for home comforts and the necessaries of life, never dreaming of drawbacks in the shape of sickness, etc. There should be a law requiring a young man to state before court his ability to care for and support a wife before he marries her. The fact of the matter is, this business of mere boys getting married should be stopped. Many and many a time, after marriage, they have hard work to support their family. They lose their situation, get ill, or something of the sort. Then they get into debt, never get out, and live a hard, weary life, and heartily wish they had never heard of marriage. Love is all very well, but one can't make three meals a day out of it, and it won't pay house rent and board bills. Some of these younglings think only of the blissful future, with no storms, no heavy expenses and all that. We do not desire to discourage early marriages, but do say most emphatically that the young man who goes into this business had better understand the cost, responsibilities and tribulations. And when they can barely support themselves, it is nothing but ridiculous madness to tie themselves to others. If the young gentlemen will kindly roll a little of the above into their cigarettes after dinner and smoke it, they will find it to set well.

RE-INVESTIGATED.

A Remarkable Statement Fully Confirmed by Three Important Interviews.

An unusual article from the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle was published in that paper recently and has been the subject of much conversation both in professional circles and on the street. Apparently it caused more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well known not only in Rochester, but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper a few days since, which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation on the subject was deemed an editorial necessity.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion at his residence, when the following interview occurred:

'That article of your's, doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?'

'Every one of them and many additional ones. Few people ever get so near the grave as I did and then return, and I am not surprised that the public think it marvelous. It was marvelous.'

'How in the world did you, a physician, come to be brought so low?'

'By neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull, indefinite pains, and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious.'

'But have these common ailments anything to do with the fearful Bright's disease which took so firm a hold on you?'

'Anything? Why, they are the sure indications of the first stages of the dreadful malady. The fact is, few people know or realize what ails them, and I am sorry to say that too few physicians do either.'

'That is a strange statement, doctor.'

'But it is a true one. The medical profession have been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. We doctors have been clipping off the twigs when we should strike at the root. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of Bright's disease even more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, stomach, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most these ailments.'

'This, then, is what you meant when you said more than one-half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it, doctor?'

'Precisely. Thousands of so-called diseases are torturing people to-day, when in reality it is Bright's disease in some one of its many forms. It is Hydra headed monster and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease.'

'And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?'

'Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy—Warner's Safe Cure. I am getting my eyes thoroughly open in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also. Why, there are no end of truths bearing on this subject. If you want to know more about it go and see Mr. Warner himself. He was sick the same as I, and is the healthiest man in Rochester to-day. He has made a study of this subject and can give you more facts than I can. Go, too, and see Dr. Lattimore, the chemist, at the University. If you want facts there are any quantity of them showing the alarming increase of Bright's disease, its simple and deceptive symptoms, and there is but one way by which it can be escaped.'

Fully satisfied of the truth and force of the doctor's words, the reporter bade him good day and called on Mr. Warner at his establishment on Exchange street. At first Mr. Warner was inclined to be reticent, but learning that the information desired was about the alarming increase of Bright's disease, his manner changed instantly and he spoke very earnestly:

'It is true that Bright's disease has increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics that in the past ten years its growth has been 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off: Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wilson, Carpenter, Bishops Haven and Peck, and others. This is terrible, and shows a greater growth than that of any other known complaint. It should be plain to every one that something should be done to check this increase or there is no knowing where it may end.'

'Do you think that many people are afflicted with it to-day, who do not realize it, Mr. Warner?'

'Hundreds of thousands. I have a striking example of this truth which has just come to my notice. A prominent professor of New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. In order to show the contrast between healthy and unhealthy fluids, he had provided a vial, the contents of which were drawn from his own person. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance changed—his color and command both left him, and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys,' and in less than a year he was dead.'

'You believe, then, that it has no symptoms of its own and is frequently unknown even by the person who is afflicted with it?'

'It has no symptoms of its own and very often none at all. Usually no two persons have the same symptoms, and frequently death is the first symptom. The slightest [illegible] difficulty should [illegible] ror to any one. I [illegible] ing about, but I [illegible] the stages of [illegible]

'You speak [illegible] what was [illegible]

'And this caused you to [illegible] it?'

'No, it caused me to [illegible] went to the principal [illegible] cians prescribing and [illegible] therefore determined [illegible] humanity and the suffering, [illegible] within their reach and now it is in every part of America, [illegible] drug store and has become a [illegible] necessity.'

The reporter left Mr. Warner, impressed with the [illegible] cerity of his statements and [illegible] visit to Dr. S. A. Lattimore, at his residence on Prince Street. Dr. Lattimore although busily engaged upon [illegible] ters connected with the State Board of Health, of which he is one of the analysts, courteously answered the questions that were propounded him:

'Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of H. H. Warner, some years ago, Doctor?'

'Yes, sir.'

'What did this analysis show you?'

'The presence of albumen and casts in great abundance.'

'And what did the symptoms indicate?'

'A serious disease of the kidneys.'

'Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?'

'No, sir. I did not think it possible. It was seldom, indeed, that so pronounced a case had, up to that time, ever been cured.'

'Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?'

'Yes, I have chemically analyzed it and upon critical examination, [illegible] entirely free from any poisonous or deleterious substances.'

We publish the foregoing statements in view of the commotion which the publicity of Dr. Henion's article has caused and to meet the protest which have been made. The [illegible] Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. [illegible] more in the community is beyond question and the statements they make [illegible] not for a moment be doubted [illegible] conclusively show that Bright's [illegible] of the kidneys is one of the most [illegible] tive and dangerous of all diseases [illegible] is exceedingly common, alarmingly increasing and that it can be cured.

LOYAL WARD.

Bradford, July 11, 1883.

As yet the democratic press have failed to find a flaw in the characters of the republican candidates.

The surplus distribution plank in the republican platform does not find much favor with the republican press of the State.

Governor Pattison's extra session costs the tax-payers of Pennsylvania $6,000 a day. And what have the people received in return—absolutely nothing.

Mr. Stebbins's democratic constituents are very much pleased because of his position on the apportionment bills and his little speech in the house last Friday.

The two democratic papers of the county—the Reporter and Democrat—will no doubt come out strong this week in commendation of the republican member of the house from McKean county.

Abram S. Hewitt, Charles A. Dana, George Hoadley and others would be satisfied to have the national democratic convention held in Buffalo. At least they say so, in letters to the Sunday Times, of that city.

The prominent democrats, in different parts of Iowa, are organizing a bolt from their party, because of its surrender to the whisky power. It is said that democratic prohibitionists all over the State will join it.

Another fool has paid the penalty of his folly. Captain Webb, the noted English swimmer, attempted the impossible feat of swimming the Niagara whirlpool and demonstrated his own foolhardiness at the expense of his life.

The democrats in the house at Harrisburg are for staying for all summer in that city, because ten dollars a day is more than they can earn at home during the dull season. There is nothing cheap about democratic reform, excepting the talk.

Hoadley, the democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, made a speech at Columbus, last Saturday, and when the shorthand report was taken to him for revision he was so frightened by what he had said that he refused to allow it to be printed.

It will be time enough to talk about distributing the surplus when the government has called in all the bonds that are payable, has abolished all internal taxation, has permitted newspapers to go through the mails free and given the people penny postage.

It is possible that candidate Shoemaker made a mistake in neglecting to publish the announcement of his candidacy for county treasurer in the Bradford Mail. But we would not have supposed that Andy would have taken a little oversight of that kind so much to heart.

The democratic programme has been announced. It is an apportionment in full [illegible] or ten dollars a day for the rest of the session. The democratic members of the house are united on that platform, and two republicans—the member from Indiana and McKean counties—claim to be in complete sympathy with them.

In another column we publish a card from A. F. Benson announcing his withdrawal from the contest for the county treasurership. What his reasons are for this action he does not inform the public, and it probably concerns no one but himself what they may be. He leaves the field to Messrs. Shoemaker, Wiggins and Ward, and in his short canvass has proven that he has many friends who will be glad for an opportunity to give him their support, if not this year, some other year.

"No Candidates Need Apply," is now a sign at the front door of the Washington departments. When a bureau officer wants a clerk, he sends around to the civil service commission for him, as a house-wife telephones to an intelligence office for a servant when one is needed. The commission, in response, will send the names of six persons who have passed satisfactory examination, from which [illegible] officer will make an appointment [illegible] will remove a great strain from the minds of congressional office-brokers.

[illegible] than they can have at home, and so they are for staying all summer. The republicans are either to accede to the demands of the democrats to gerrymander the State, or they will keep on fleecing the State to the tune of ten dollars a day each. The democrats care more about their ten dollars a day than the apportionment, but that will be the pretext for fleecing the tax-payers $10 a day, $70 a week for each member, or $2,510 each day, or $17,570 a week, or for a month of 30 days $75,300. This is the deliberate scheme of plunder by the democrats of the house. The republican joint committee of the senate and the democrats of the house have reported their inability to agree on apportionment bills, on the strength of which the republican senate have passed a resolution to adjourn the legislature, and save their pay of ten dollars a day to the State. This the democratic members of the house refuse to do. The issue is too plain to deceive the taxpayers. The democrats don't believe the republicans will ever agree to accept their apportionment, and the only object in continuing in session is the ten dollars a day.—Lancaster Examiner.

General E. O. C. Ord, of the United States army, took passage on board the steamer City of Washington at Vera Cruz for New York last Sunday, and was taken with yellow fever and died in a few hours.

General Ord was a native of Cumberland, Md., where he was born in 1818, and graduated at West Point in 1839. He served in the Seminole war in 1839–42 and was in the coast survey in 1845–6. Previous to the outbreak of the rebellion he was engaged for several years in service in California and the territories. On September 14, 1861, he was made brigadier general of volunteers, and commanded a brigade in the Pennsylvania Reserves under General McCall. He was promoted to a major-generalship in May, 1862, and was placed in command of the 18th and afterwards the second division of the district of Western Tennessee. At the siege of Vicksburg he commanded the thirteenth corps, and in the operations before Richmond, from July 21, to September 30, 1864, the eighteenth corps. From January to June he was in command of the department of Virginia, and took part in the siege of Petersburg and the capture of Lee. General Ord was twice wounded, at the battle of Hatchie, October 5, 1862, and in the capture of Fort Harrison. Since the close of the war General Ord has commanded the departments of California, the Platte and Texas, and in 1866 was made brigadier general in the regular army. In January, 1881, he was placed on the retired list, and since then has lived most of the time with his son-in-law, General Trevino, formerly the Mexican minister of war.

The Erie Observer says that "Niles was prominent in the bolt that beat Harry Oliver for senator and elected Mitchell. He also worked and voted against Beaver and the whole stalwart ticket last fall." This is only half correct. That Mr. Niles was in the bolt against Oliver is correct, as he considered himself virtually instructed for Grow. He is not a model stalwart republican, but he is not a rampant independent, with much zeal and no discretion. The last sentence of the above extract from our democratic contemporary of Erie is wholly untrue. Mr. Niles supported General Beaver, and the whole republican ticket, energetically on the stump and at the polls. This is the simple truth which can be readily substantiated, and he is entitled to fair play in his canvass. The duties of the office of auditor general requires a man of ability and honesty, and Jerome B. Niles has those qualifications in an eminent degree. The acknowledged leader of the republicans in the legislature, he is a good enough republican for anyone.—Franklin Repository.

A terrible disaster occurred near Baltimore on Monday. Under the auspices of a beneficial society connected with the Corpus Christi Roman Catholic church an annual excursion was given at North Point, an excursion resort about thirteen miles from the city, which was attended by over 1,000 people. As the last boat arrived at the pier, a narrow structure built out about 800 feet from the shore, fully 200 people made a rush to get on board. Suddenly a crash was heard, and in an instant, before the eyes of the terrified spectators, the end of the pier was seen to give way, precipitating the mass of people into the water. Fully sixty-five lives were lost, mostly young girls and children. Why will people risk their lives in large excursion companies of any kind?

The judicial apportionment conference committee of both houses of the legislature agreed upon a judicial apportionment bill yesterday, and will so report to both houses this morning. The bill makes Tioga a single district, and, as the report reads, "Potter is added to McKean in the forty-eighth district." As we understand it, this means that McKean constitutes a separate district with Potter attached. This being a correct assumption, the president judge must necessarily reside in McKean county, which would be very proper and satisfactory to all most concerned in the business of the courts.

The universal topic of interest at the present time is the great telegraph operators' strike. The sympathy of the public generally, at least all who understand the matter and are not by reason of interest or disposition favorable to the support of organized capital and monopolies as against the laborer, artisan and producer, is with the operators. All this talk about conspiracies, riots and interference with [illegible] to the enormous state of [illegible] tions, upon which fictitious capital the company is paying dividends. To do this it was necessary first to rob the public by exorbitant rates, then to rob the employees by cutting down wages. To labor twelve to fourteen hours a day, at bare living wages, with no extra pay for over time or Sunday work that Jay Gould and his associates might roll in wealth finally wore out the patience of the operators, and after their respectful petitions for redress were insolently ignored, they quit work as they had a perfect right. One company—the American Rapid—has compromised with the operators and they have gone to work again. It is hoped and believed by all good men that the Western Union will also soon be compelled to do justice to their faithful and hard worked employees.

According to the Bradford Mail all our county officials whose duties require them to reside at the county seat are experts in the game of "draw poker." It is possible that the editor of that paper may know what he is talking about, and, indeed, may have dearly paid for his knowledge; but it is not at all probable. Such a charge, however, is too nonsensical and baseless to merit even an attempt at refutation.

Putting Themselves in the Wrong.

The position of the democrats in the legislature with respect to the apportionment bills, says the Pittsburg Commercial Gazette, puts them clearly in the wrong. The action of the governor in calling an extra session was based wholly and solely on the requirements of the constitution. He said, in substance: "The constitution demands that the State be apportioned. The legislature neglected this duty at the regular session, and my oath of office admonishes me that I shall demand the performance of this duty at their hands forthwith." The democratic press all over the State had been clamoring for a compliance with the "plain mandates of the constitution," and the extra session was the result.

But there is a good deal more in the constitution that relates to the calling of an extra session. The provision with respect to the apportionment of the State requires that the districts shall be composed of compact and contiguous territory, and that representation shall be based upon population. These provisions the democrats have persistently ignored. They pay no more attention to them than if they were not in the organic law. They cannot get what they want and obey these requirements, so they substitute the respective party votes for population as a basis for representation, and cut and chop counties without regard to compactness or contiguity. In a word, they set the "plain mandates" of the constitution at defiance in order to gain a party advantage.

The republican leaders have made this whole matter plain, and if there is to be an "appeal to the people" next fall, on the question of responsibility for the extra session and failure to apportion the State we need have no fears for the result. The theory that representation should be based on the party vote instead of on the population, is not only illegal but unsound in its application. The democrats claim, for example, that they should have twenty-four members of the senate, and yet they exhaust all the democratic majorities in the State to get twenty-one. Senator Macfarlane has illustrated the impracticability as well as the fallacy of this theory by showing how it would work in Iowa and Georgia, two States of opposite politics, thus:

"In Iowa the republican vote in 1880 was 183,000 and the democratic 105,000. Now, according to the democratic theory, the nine districts of Iowa in 1880 should have been six republican and three democratic, but they are all republican, although they sometimes elect democrats from them. You cannot make a single district democratic on the vote of 1880, as there are but five counties, not contiguous, that give democratic majorities, amounting altogether to 2,400. Now, in Georgia the reverse is true. There the democratic vote is 102,000 and the republican 54,000, and that, on the theory of the democrats, should give six democrats and three republicans, yet they were all democrats that year and could not well be otherwise, as only sixteen counties, not contiguous, give republican majorities, amounting altogether to 3,824."

The senator very justly remarks that a theory which cannot be made to work out correct results in the State for which it was proposed, and fails absolutely when applied elsewhere, cannot be the true principle of making an apportionment. The republicans have placed themselves upon stable grounds and can afford to stand firm. If the democrats choose to accept their ultimation well and good. If they intend to adhere to their determination not to do so, they should bring the session to a close without wasting another day and make their appeal to the people. Doubtless they hesitate about adjourning because they have put themselves so completely in the wrong that there is nothing left them upon which to base a popular appeal.

Two States Compared.

Louisville Commercial (Ind.)

The area of the two States of Ohio and Kentucky are nearly the same.

One has as many natural advantages as the other.

Ohio favors protecting and fostering its manufactories.

Kentucky advocates free trade and plenty of pistol pockets.

The result is this:

Ohio has double the population of Kentucky.

Ohio is dotted all over with thriving manufacturing towns.

Kentucky is not so dotted.

Ohio has a home market for its agricultural products.

Kentucky has poor and insignificant home markets.

The farmers of Ohio have grown rich.

The most of the farmers in Kentucky remain poor.

Agricultural laborers in Ohio last year received on an average $24.53 per month.

Agricultural laborers in Kentucky at the same time only received $15.25 per month.

Such is the contrast between a State which favors protection and a State [illegible]

[illegible] A legislative [illegible] New Hampshire costs $1[illegible] a day, and Pennsylvania it costs $2,[illegible]

The democrats of Pennsylvania will have to pull their own chestnuts out of the fire this fall.

Dorsey's kick at the dead lion reminds one of pouring water on a duck's back.—Baltimore American.

The revival of Tildenism resembles the Trojan horse. There are several men concealed in it.—Springfield Republican.

Accepting Dorsey's story as true, what have the democrats to say of the character of their voters in Indiana, who could be bought up at the rate of $2 a head?—Boston Herald.

Governor St. John thinks that Kansas will raise 20,000,000 bushels of corn this year. The whisky possibilities of such a crop ought to make Governor St. John thoughtful.—Ex.

Marsh T. Polk, the treasurer of Tennessee, who stole about 300,000 of the funds of the State, is now on trial for the theft. Whether he will be retired to the penitentiary, like any other thief, remains to be seen. He was one of the most popular democrats of the State, a graduate of West Point, an officer in the confederate army, and a nephew of ex-President Polk.

The crop of democratic candidates before the convention about two weeks hence promises well. Those mentioned for State treasurer are Ben Bryson McCool, of Schuylkill; Col. T. D. Fister and William Nolan, of Berks; R. J. McGrann, of Lancaster; C. M. Straub, of Allegheny; B. K. Jamison and John E. Faunce, speaker of the democratic reform menagerie, and John H Walker, of Erie, with the back counties to hear from. The names mentioned for auditor general are W. Hayes Greer, Columbia Herald; J. K. Bogert, Union-Leader, Wilkesbarre; and the "democratic press" generally.

Senator Wallace said during a speech in the senate the other day that the republican legislature of 1881 could have made an apportionment in 1880, but that they sat silent and refused to do so. This is a mistake. The legislature was without the necessary date to make an apportionment. Congress had not indicated the ratio of representation, and the official census figures were not available, which is absolutely essential under the new constitution. Gov. Hoyt could have convened the legislature in extra session for this purpose, but he had a wholesome dread of extra sessions, as Gov. Pattison will probably hereafter.—Chambersburg Repository.

Kansas City Journal.

Resolved, first—We are the democratic party and sole legatees of Thomas Jefferson's principles and trade mark (no explanations given.)

Second—We want the whole earth.

Third—And we mean to have it.

Fourth—That is, if we can get it.

Fifth—And don't you forget it.

Sixth.—We want it distinctly understood that we do not straddle the tariff question. We go it blind—and deaf, and would like to go it dumb. We want a tariff for old women and young women; rich and poor men; for revenue only, but we want the wool men of Ohio protected. We want a tariff for everybody, and will arrange all inconsistencies after we are elected.

Seventh—We believe in pensioning soldiers, protecting our citizens, having permanent money, and paying off the public debt. The Republican party has done that but d—n the republican party.

Eighth—No monopolies, except in office-holding by Ohio Democrats.

Ninth—We do not know Ben. Butler.

Tenth.—High license, but free whisky.

Your Town.

An exchange gives the following sensible advice: "Speak well of your town, patronize your home merchants, read your home paper, give a hearty welcome to new-comers, treat with courtesy friends of your associates who may from time to time visit them, be free, be generous, be self-denying, be honorable, and pay the printer."

The secret of the universal success of Brown's Iron Bitters is owing to the fact that it is the very best iron preparation made. By a thorough and rapid assimilation with the blood it reaches every part of the body, giving health, strength and endurance to every portion. Thus beginning at the foundation it builds up and restores lost health. It does not contain whisky or alcohol. It will not blacken the teeth. It does not constipate or cause headache. It will cure dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, sleeplessness, dizziness, nervous debility, weakness, etc.

Nature Cleanses

The system, if given an opportunity, but very few persons find time to give nature a chance and so the blood, which is the great drain for carrying away impurities, becomes so clogged with disease that unless some help is given it, the person will be afflicted by blood poisoning and suffer with Pimples, Boils, Carbuncles, Cancers, Scrofula, &c., and often die without help. Save yourself from all this suffering and loss of time by using Parmelee's Blood Purifier which prevents all diseases in the system. Large bottles $1. Sold by A. R. Armstrong and E. F. —You can shoot woodcock now; provided you can find any to shoot.

—A fine lot of hay has been made on John W. Brennan's farm across the creek.

—Bad weather alike for both hay and bark, two of the largest products of the county.

—The narrow gauge road is carrying out large quantities of lumber daily, shipped mostly to Buffalo.

—Unless the weather should get warm and dry in is thought the potato crop will not be an abundant one.

—Every meeting of the grand army post here sees some old veteran taken into the order who has never joined before.

—The work of mowing the grass along the sidewalks is going on in some parts of the town, but is not so general as it should be.

—The Bradford lawyers haven't the necessary courage when it comes to a game of base ball with their brethren of this village.

—Up to the time of going to press nothing has been learned as to what disposition Capt. Webb made of his remains after he suicided.

—The sermon delivered at the M. E. church last Sunday evening by Rev. H. B. Fry, of Salem, O., was greatly enjoyed by the congregation.

—The argument court which sat a day or two during the week was of no interest to any except attorneys, and apparently of but little to them.

—Owing to the unusually rainy season the foundation for the new brick, building to be used as a postoffice, has not been laid yet or ground broken for it.

—The coal lands of McKean county are being sought after very industriously by eastern men who recognize in them the source of great wealth in the near future.

—Next Sunday afternoon a gospel meeting will be held at the opera house conducted by Rev. Gates, of the Baptist church and Rev. Hubbell of the M. E. church.

—Rev. Dr. H. P. Burdick will deliver an address at the union temperance meeting at the M. E. church next Sunday evening at eight o'clock. Do not fail to hear it.

—The veterans in Rew City and vicinity have given notice that they will give a dance and camp-fire at their place Aug. 3. The Post here has received an invitation.

—The Bradford newspapers claims that a challenge sent to our base ball club by the players there, received no attention whatever, not even declined. How is this, boys?

—Three democratic candidates for the treasurership nomination are promised from the other side of the hill, and perhaps many more of which we have heard nothing yet.

—So far this summer we have not heard of a single [illegible] accident and editors and reporters begin to suspect that there has been a combination formed against them.

—The McKean Democrat can always be found in the reading-room.—Davis City Correspondence Democrat. Not so the MINER. It would be nipped within five minutes of its arrival. It's valuable.

—The telegraph operators seem to be getting the best of the monopolies, the American Rapid having acceded to the demands of the boys, and work on their lines and in their offices has been resumed.

—The recent appointed auditor of the R. B. & K. road found everything satisfactory at the station in this place, and complimented station agent Walsh on the thorough system of his management of the office.

—The commissioners have completed and ready for delivery, transcripts for school boards, road supervisors and others, and have about completed their reports to the State officials, all this of the assessment of 1883.

—Its probably a serious matter, but then one can't help laughing when a Port Allegany man comes to town and before hitching his horse rushes into a saloon somewhere to see how long he has been coming over the hill.

—A railroad is being built into and through Damascus—the same Damascus that we read of in the New Testament. Just imagine St. Paul hanging around the superintendent's office to get a clergyman's pass to Joppa and return.

—The county prohibition lecturer left hastily last Friday morning, having become satisfied that her efforts would not evangelize this place. She went to Davis City, and will work her way and her peculiar racket through the little oil towns on the hill.

—An exchange says that a country editor sometimes thinks of one thing and [illegible] of another, and sometimes when he is thinking of one thing it makes him think of another, and again there are times when he thinks he can't think of anything.

—The old veterans of Mercer county met in convention at Mercer last week and organized the "Mercer County Veterans' Association," elected officers and adopted a constitution and by-laws. Their first encampment will be in Mercer, commencing on October 2d, and lasting three days.

—Messrs. J. B. Henderson and A. L. Gordon, of Brookville, executors of the Paul Darling estate, and R. O. Wright, a partner with the late Mr. Darling in the ownership of his western lands, were in town yesterday. The executors have recently disposed of a large tract of western lands, and came here with the double purpose of paying some of the legacies under the will and conferring with Messrs. B. D. and H. Hamlin, who own in conjunction with Mr. Wright and the Darling estate equal interests in another large tract of pine land in Wisconsin. The executors paid J. C. Hamlin and his son W. O. $5,000 each.

W. O. Hamlin made a flying trip from New York yesterday to meet the executors of the Darling estate and receipt for the neat little sum of $5,000, which was paid over to him in accordance with the will of his grand-uncle. Will well deserves this little wind-fall, and as he has shown his ability to make his own way in the world we have no doubt that he will make it a nucleus to a comfortable fortune. He is now confidential clerk for Herbert & Spencer, the large grain brokers of New York city, possessing the trust and confidence of his employers, and we are proud to record the success of a Smethport boy in a city where so many fail. He relapses to the [illegible]

[illegible] Bradford possessed a large amount of [illegible] and skill in the national game, and after a few moments flung in the face of Mr. Hamlin a peremptory challenge to pick a nine from among the Smethport lawyers to cross the willow with a like number from Bradford.

With so much assurance was this challenge uttered and with such persistency was it urged that Mr. Hamlin, on behalf of the lawyers of this town accepted it, and at once set about his arrangements to accomodate the hot blooded delegate from the classic "Tuna."

Everything was arranged apparently to the satisfaction of both parties, and it was agreed that the game should be called promptly at 4 o'clock.

A further condition of the game, insisted on by the Smethport side was that if Capt. Chapman played, he was to do so with his head so completely bandaged as to preclude the possibility of his uttering a single intelligible word during the progress of the game. To this the representative of the Bradford players readily assented, believing it to be absolutely necessary, and a move by which they would profit equally with their opponents. As a further inducement to the Bradford nine, and to make the game more even and therefore heighten the interest it was agreed to exchange Squire Ford for Reva Crossman, Ford being a much better fielder than Crossman, though not so strong at the bat.

As the afternoon wore away and our folks were making every preparation to trim up the verdant club from the fog district it became apparent that they were getting somewhat nervous over it, as the penalty of being beaten was to be suppers for all the players at one of the hotels. The manager of their nine, Mr. Wiel, grew very uneasy, and when the clock struck four, the hour at which the game was to commence he was noticed to be unusually busy with a large bundle of papers, while he cast stealthy glances about him, watching carefully the representatives of the other side who were enjoying his confusion immensely. Seeing that it would be difficult if not impossible to force them into a game nothing further was said about it, but all agree that the lawyers of Bradford have earned the title of old-men-afraid-of-base-ball. This was a clear case of biting off more than he could "chaw."

PERSONAL MENTION.

W. P. Weston, Esq., of Kane, is in town.

Hon. H. W. Williams presided at the argument court this week.

Elisha K. and Evan O. Kane, sons of Gen. Thomas L. Kane, are registered at the Grand Central Hotel.

Reuben G. Wright, of Westfield, N. Y., has been in town a day or two. It is fortunate Col. Wilcox didn't happen to be here.

Mrs. A. E. Taylor has returned from her visit to Buffalo, whither she went to visit her daughter, Mrs. Newman, and to attend the saengerfest.

Mrs. J. B. Sprague, Meadville, Mrs. A. P. Sprague, Salamanca, and Miss Mabel Owen, daughter of Postmistress Owen at Randolph, N. Y., are guests of Mrs. A. T. Palmer, of this place.

Hon. A. G. Olmsted, Additional Law Judge of this district has been holding court in Armstrong county trying some important cases in which the Judge of that district was interested to such extent as to disqualify him as a court.

Hugh P. Brawley, deputy prothonotary, left Tuesday morning for San Francisco, whither he journeys to be present at the tri-ennial conclave of Knights Templar, which takes place in August. Mr. Brawley will visit Washington Territory and many other portions of the west before he returns.

Difficult Problem Solved.

During the sitting of the court this week a petition from citizens of Liberty township was presented, praying for the opening or extension of a road or something of the kind. Sam W. Smith, of Port Allegany, was opposing the scheme and gave as a reason for so doing that the road would cost more than the advantage to be derived from it would benefit the public. As a proof of this he cited the fact that at one point it would be necessary to make a great excavation, and that there was no convenient place to dump the earth taken out. He said it could not be thrown down the hill, as it would fall upon and obstruct the railroad track, and the expense of carting it away would be altogether too great, and in an earnest and somewhat excited tone he asked the court:

"What will we do with the earth, your Honor?" when Hon. B. D. Hamlin, whose fertility of resource has long been a proverb, whispered to him in a voice loud enough to be heard throughout the bar, "Why, you can dig a hole and bury it, can't you?"

Rixford Not Ready to Muster.

On the strength of a statement coming from Bradford that Colonel Brown, A. D. C., would muster a post of the Grand Army at Rixford last night, Commander R. F. Wright, of McKean Post, went to that village last Tuesday afternoon to be present and lend his assistance in the work, but finding none of the comrades about, and not being able to learn that the muster was likely to occur, he took the outgoing train and went to Bradford. It appears that some mistake had been made in the issuing of the order, (the mistake which sometimes defeats an army,) and the men were not assembled for muster. Further notice will be given, when, it is hoped, McKean Post will be well represented and assist in bringing this youngest member into the brotherhood.

Painful Accident to a Mill Hand.

Monday last while Will Darlingame was at work on the planer at Gifford's mill he sustained an injury that will give him a vacation, although we are informed and hope he will not be permanently injured thereby. It seems that in passing a board through the planer, it stuck or was difficult to force through for some reason and in forcing it the young man's hand slipped, and in an instant was caught in the knives and cut in a painful manner. It is a piece of good fortune that the hand or arm was not lost instead of a comparatively slight injury sustained.

Vocal and Instrumental Music.

The choir of St. Luke's church, assisted by Miss Fanny [illegible], of [illegible], and Mr. E. V. [illegible], will give a concert at the opera house on Friday evening, August 3d. [illegible]

[illegible] Starting on last Thursday [illegible] tions below a dollar it has reached during the week as high as six and a fourth cents, closing this evening strong at 104⅛. The feeling is one of confidence and the probability is that the coming week will show very material gains by the bulls.

The fluctuations of the week up to the close of the market to-day will be shown by the following table:

C. C. Melvin will not be a candidate for county treasurer, he thinks he has trouble enough with his rheumatic limbs without engaging in the uncertain and vexatious scramble for political preferment.

An excursion to the log bridge next Thursday under the auspices of the Grand Army post of this place will no doubt draw well, as they are noted as the most generous entertainers in the city when they set about it. They have secured the unusually low rate of fifty cents round trip fare.

Julius Behling, the young man through whose efforts the very successful gymnastic organization has been effected has tendered his resignation as vice president of the club, owing to the great demand now made upon his time by the study of the sanscrit language which he will in future employ in writing poetry, in which he is an adept.

All dogs are required to wear regulation muzzles from the first of July to the fifteenth day of August according to an ordinance of the city. If this ordinance could be extended to embrace some of the members of the common branch of council it would do a vast deal of good and would give the weary tax paying citizen a much needed rest.

Quite a number of our lawyers have been absent some days in attendance on the sitting of the U. S. district court at Erie, and to see some of the young sprigs and hear them talk you would think the supreme court would be nothing more to them than an alderman's court to attorney general Brewster. Too much of this sort of swagger is more than enough.

Hon. W. W. Brown, attorney for the Rochester & Pittsburg railroad company went to Rochester on Monday last on business in which the road is concerned, and in which they were having a council of war of all their legal aids. When the company selected Col. Brown as their legal representative at this end of the road they gave additional proof of that knowledge of men and that foresight in business which has made them the strong and successful corporation that they are.

The strike among the lightning manipulators has been the theme of much of the current conversation of the week, and the very good conduct of the strikers has called forth expressions of commendation on all sides, and, indeed, entitled the boys to the good opinion of all who have observed them. They express themselves as entirely confident of ultimate success, and say that they will hold out as long as the head of their organization deems it advisable whether successful or not.

How fast they go. On Monday night A. C. Williams who for a long time has kept the well known Williams house on Webster street died of inflammation of the stomach, the direct consequence of chronic diarrhoea contracted while in the army during the late war. Mr. Williams was a member of Bradford Post, 141, G.A.R., and the remains were taken charge of by that organization and conveyed to the depot, whence they were sent to his former home in New York State for interment.

The work of rebuilding many of the dilapidated sidewalks of the city is going forward with most commendable speed, and the class of new walks we are getting are at once good and good looking, and add very much to the looks of many of the streets. In the past I have sometimes criticised the work of the street commissioners, and with good reason for some of his work has been worse than none, and a useless expenditure of the public money, but these sidewalks are good, well built, were badly needed and will well repay each property holder for the money laid out.

I have not seen so many people in the city at one time for more than three years as have filled the streets during the past week; but what the cause of it is, I confess I am unable to determine. It is not that the market is of any particular interest that would draw outside people here to hazard a chance on its uncertain wave, for it has, for a week, been anything but safe and tempting. Whether it may be that the telegraphers' strike, having set free through the day time the operators and messengers, makes this change and adds to the appearance of the crowds or not I cannot say, but it would not seem that some two hundred men and boys would make this seeming difference.

Umpiring a game of base ball is not a task that every one can get up and do, or, perhaps it would be more proper to say, a thing that any one can do right. It takes both brains and experience to properly conduct a game of ball, and perhaps none of our people are so well qualified for this trying position as a councilman. In a recent game on the Washington street grounds the game was ably, though rather boyishly umpired by a member of the common council from the third ward. The only objection to him as an umpire, and that is hardly worth mentioning, is the fact of his being in the way of the batter all the time, but then the batter ought to select some position out of the way of the umpire.

A good many of our people, those who have cottages as well as many who have not, have gone to Chautauqua lake to spend the heated term in preference to sweltering it out with their neighbors here at home. Those who can do so are fortunate, while those who cannot go this summer can comfort themselves with the probability that by another year they, too, can take their ease at some of the watering places. It is noticeable that some who but a year or two ago thought they could not endure the summer heat at home, can now, not only stay at home but work all through the summer, the reason being that their riches have taken wings and flown away. Well, it is fortunate for them that they can adapt themselves to their altered circumstances.

The withdrawal of "Tory" Bannon from the race for the treasurer nomination was entirely unexpected by all, even his friends and advisers had not been taken into his confidence in this important step until he had fully resolved upon it and was in the act of carrying it into execution. What caused Mr. Bannon to determine on this step is not yet clear, as he certainly had the inside track in this end of the county up to the hour that he determined to leave the course. Having decided that it was best for him to abandon the contest, I think Mr. Bannon did himself great credit to do so before the campaign had gone so far as that it could have been charged that he took the course he did in the interest of any other of the candidates, who are genial gentlemen of ability, and in either of whose hands the office of county treasurer would be ably managed.

A very neat little scandal, involving a woman, who long since lost her good name, a broker in the oil exchange and a horse dealer and jockey from Olean has come to the surface and runs like this: The woman had been receiving the visits of the broker for some time, (the broker is of the sanguine-blonde type) but meeting the Olean horseman fell madly in love with him, and he was pleased with her, and frequently visited her. It seems, however, that he did not know of her intimacy with the broker, so knowing, determined to stop it. Well, one night during the recent rains here the horse man went to call on the frail fair one and found the broker safely stowed away in her rooms and bed. His indignation was aroused, and presuming on his rights and superior strength he took the man of oil by the collar and such other convenient portion of his clothing or person as presented, and threw him down stairs, afterward throwing his clothing after him. The broker thinking discretion the better part of valor, went his way, and now it is said, carefully avoids Kennedy street in his strolls about town.

I must again mention the new city hall, for it is coming along so fast and is going to be such an ornament to the city and so great a convenience to the officers that it will warrant frequent mention, until it is completed at least. The frame, or inside work, is up and the roof on, and now the bricklayers are busy as bees getting the outside, or "veneering," on it, and it begins to assume very imposing proportions and appearance. I am not fully prepared to give a description of the inside, as I have not yet found time and a chaperone who is well acquainted with the plans to go through it, but this much I am able to say: There will be quarters for the mayor, the select and common councils, two or three of the fire organizations and a police court, with, perhaps, other accommodations of which I am not at present informed. The inclement weather is interfering with the masons in the prosecution of their part of the work, but as it is a short horse it can be curried between times, and very soon, when you come to the metropolis, we will show you through the city hall with all the pride and importance that a New Yorker would take you over the Brooklyn bridge, or Wilmouth would present to you his greatest work of art, the Kinzua viaduct.

No county, perhaps in the whole nation has had its bowels disturbed or moved to the extent that McKean has since the expiration of the Roberts torpedo patent. With the death by litigation of the shameful monopoly the glycerine men and moonlighters came out of the shades in which they had been so long hidden, and by putting down the price of torpedoes to a price that was within the reach of the consumer and still left a reasonable margin for the shooter, they have brought about a renewal of the shooting business and made a profitable occupation for themselves. But there is still a great difference between the concerns that carry on the manufacturing of nitro-glycerine, perhaps as much difference in this product as in any other class of manufactured goods. Of all those engaged in the manufacture of this powerful agent there is none who stand so well with the consumer, as the Rock Glycerine Co. No. 12 Chambers street, of which R. A. Dempsey is agent. Not even Roberts, with all his boasting, has gained the reputation for clean and pure stock that the "Rock" has, and the additional reason that the purer the [illegible] is the safer it is to handle has made a demand for their glycerine that extends as far as the field reaches, or the material is used.

Oil circles were thrown into a condition of the wildest excitement last Friday by the rumor becoming current on the street that M. D. Archbald, a well known broker, and a heretofore well respected business man, had been guilty of a grave larceny in order to cover up a bad break he had made in the market. The story ran to the effect that just previous to the telegraphers' strike, Archbald, thinking he saw a chance to turn the affair to his own account, sold short some [illegible] barrels with the expectation that the strike, when it did come, would break the bottom out of the market and afford him an opportunity to fill at a very much lower figure. In this he was mistaken, and, when pressed for delivery, borrowed some [illegible] barrels and for the time held himself up. But this would not do long, as the market manifested a stubborn disposition to go up, and it became evident that Mr. Archbald would have to go up too, but in a very materially different sense. It seems, also, that some mistake or discrepancy existed in the figures whereby Archbald found himself long 2,000 barrels, and when notified of this asked a clerk for the papers, or evidence, of whatever kind, to take with him to the bank to rectify the mistake. Not returning as soon as expected, the clearing house people became excited and caused a warrant to issue for his arrest charging him with larceny. After some little search Mr. Archbald was found at his home and taken before Recorder Shaw, who, after a full and exhaustive hearing, discharged him, there being no evidence of larceny in the case according to the judgment of the magistrate. Since all this fuss and flurry I am informed, and I think correctly, that Mr. Archbald has disposed of some property and arranged everything satisfactorily.

Gone to Meet Sam Patch.

That another fool has taken himself out of the world, and ceased his annoyance of his fellow men cannot be a source of regret to any, and the following will show that the least one more of the sensational fools has acted wisely though it may appear rashly: "Capt. Webb attempted to swim the whirlpool rapids Tuesday afternoon. He dived into the water at 4 o'clock 200 yards above the old suspension bridge and then swam towards the rapids. As he entered them under the bridge he was nearly turned over by the force of the water. From this point until in the midst of the rapids he was plainly seen by those on the bridge. At times he plunged out of sight then could be seen on top of a huge wave. He gradually passed through and continued towards the whirlpool. People followed in carriages. The last seen of the captain was as he entered the whirlpool, when he was apparently doing nicely, but immediately sank and nothing had been heard from him at 10 p. m.

LATER.—Capt. Webb perished in the attempt to swim the Niagara river whirlpool and rapids this afternoon. When the swimmer struck the whirlpool he was rushed to the American side where the waves are from three to four feet high. The last seen of him was when he threw up one arm. His intention was to pass the whirlpool on the Canada side. Webb leaves a wife and two children in England.

The refusal of the railroads and hotels at the falls to have anything to do with what they termed his going to death rendered the affair financially a failure. The river has been searched two miles below the whirlpool but no trace of the swimmer has been found. It is generally conceded he was engulfed in the whirlpool. Webb's manager gives up all hope of his safety."

The Peoples' Encyclopedia.

It is rare that one desiring books of information on all subjects has the ability to procure them. As a rule those having the inclination are the least able. These encyclopedias have become of late years very popular and in great demand, because they give information on all subjects in condensed form and at prices within reach of people of moderate means. Yet there are thousands of people who cannot afford the many-volumed and voluminous encyclopedias, and even if they could find them too clumsy and cumbersome for daily use. To obviate this difficulty and bring these sources of knowledge within the reach of all, Phillips & Hunt, the great publishing firm, have issued an encyclopedia in three crown octavo volumes, embracing all the information contained in the old 20-volume editions, besides an immense mass of new matter of especial interest to our own people. The facts and salient points of information are given, shorn of all the cumbrous and tiresome minute detail. All that any but a close student or scientist wishes to know upon any subject is fully set forth. The contributors to its pages comprise a long list of the most eminent scientists, specialists and scholars. A close examination of this work will fill one with wonder that so much information could be condensed in so small space. The prices are very reasonable, and there is no reason why every one should not now possess a full and comprehensive encyclopedia of all knowledge.

An Elephant Boarding a Railway Train.

A few days ago the Erie train from New York to Chicago arrived in Hornellsville about forty minutes late. This detention was caused by a very mysterious application of the air brakes, which had brought the train to a stop three times between Elmira and Hornellsville. While the train was whirling along at a rapid speed it would suddenly come to a stand still with an abruptness that startled the passengers and greatly mystified the train men. Investigation failed to show any cause for the setting of the brakes. At Hornellsville the car inspectors made a careful examination of the brakes, but could find nothing out of order. While the train was standing there the brakes were again applied, and the difficulty seemed to come from the Chicago express car. An inspection was made, and it was found that a baby elephant in the car had been using its trunk to close the little rope which passed through the car communicating with the air brakes, causing the delay before mentioned. For the rest of the trip the trunk was properly checked.—Cattaraugus Union.

Port Allegany High School.

The board of school directors of Port Allegany borough have issued from the press of the Reporter a neatly gotten up and well printed catalogue of the borough school, giving list of teachers and pupils, school regulations, course of instruction, expenses per term, and such other general information as might be of interest to parents and pupils. The publication of such a catalogue or prospectus is an excellent idea, and the example of the directors might be profitably followed by others. It is evident that Port Allegany is blessed with an active, progressive corps of teachers and a live board of school directors.

At a regular meeting of the Grand Army Post one night this week the following action was taken which explains itself and which shows that the boys can appreciate to the full any favor extended to a comrade or the family of one:

DEP'T. OF PA., G. A. R. }

SMETHPORT, Pa., July, 28th, 1883.

WHEREAS: It has come to the knowledge of this Post that some kind hand has erected over the last resting place of our comrade, L. S. Burd, a memorial stone, that will show to future generations, where lies a hero tried and true, and

WHEREAS: This Post is also informed that this generous act was performed by Mrs. A. E. Taylor, our townswoman, therefore,

Resolved: That McKean Post, 347, G. A. R. hereby tender to Mrs. Taylor their heartfelt thanks for this act of kindly remembrance to the memory of one who shared our dangers with us, and whose devotion to his country in its hour of need was stronger than the love of life;

Resolved: That this generous remembrance of our comrade dead, so carefully kept from the public finds a responsive echo in the heart of every comrade of this Post, and adds additional proof that the mothers, wives and daughters of the Nation were the sufferers and the true heroes of the war.

Resolved: That these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Post and that an engrossed copy be furnished to Mrs. A. E. Taylor.

Now Let Him Come

"Last Tuesday a boy was engaged in plowing on the farm of a man named Wilkinson, between Greenwood and Monroetown in Bradford county, when he saw an enormous blacksnake lying stretched along on the ground near the fence. Frightened by the reptile, the boy dropped the lines and started on a run for the house. Reinforced by several members of the family, he went back where one of the horses was found lying on the ground with the python tightly coiled about its neck. The snake was dispatched, when it was found that the horse was dead, its life having been choked out by the snake."

The foregoing snake story is from the Elmira Advertiser and is unquestionably a lie. In saying this we do so with a full appreciation of the responsibilities in the matter, but this thing has gone far enough and we will stop it right here or perish. We expect of course to be challenged by the editor of the Advertiser, but rather than allow such a shameful story to go longer uncontradicted we will accept in advance, any challenge he may send and will fight him at any time and place with any weapon he may choose from a hoe handle to a man-of-war. It is a lie. Now let him come.

It is sometimes charged against the school system that it is expensive, and people frequently complain of the oppressiveness of school tax. It is recommended that the following table be studied and carefully compared with the cost of instruction if received away from home, or from private tutors:

Narrow Gauge Officials Inspecting the Road.

To-day a special train bearing Edward P. Campbell, the newly appointed auditor of the Erie narrow gauge system, J. Edward Ransom and C. W. Cone, arrived at this end of the road about half past two o'clock, when the party immediately sought the seclusion and refreshing influence of the Grand Central dining-room. It is understood that the object of the visit was to show Mr. Campbell over the road, meet the agents at the several stations and make their acquaintance. The work on which Mr. Campbell is entering is no light task when it is understood that there is in his district, over his lines, near a hundred and fifty miles of road, and more than fifty stations, telegraph offices and the like. Mr. R. is spoken of as a railroad man of experience and thoroughness, and will no doubt be of great assistance in the management of the little roads.

The trustees of Randolph recently adopted a resolution exempting from taxation for five years the furniture factory, glove factory and the factory of W. A. Eddy, all of which are now doing business in that village, and the same exemption is offered to any legitimate manufacturing enterprise locating there.

HOW WATCHES ARE MADE.

In a SOLID GOLD WATCH, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus gold is actually needless. In James Boss' Patent Gold Watch Cases this WASTE is saved, and SOLIDITY and STRENGTH increased by a simple process, at one-half the cost. A plate of SOLID GOLD is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this the cases, backs, centers, bezels, etc., are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving and engine turning. These cases have been worn perfectly smooth by use without removing the gold. This is the only case made under this process. Each case is accompanied with a valid guarantee signed by the manufacturers warranting it to wear 20 years. 150,000 of these Cases now carried in the United States and Canada. Largest and Oldest Factory. Established 1854. Ask your Jeweler.

By Universal Accord,

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, and being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them; and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

Dexter.
'Perhaps [illegible] I do not ask for a decision now. Plead your own cause [illegible] the next week, and then Amy shall give her reply.'

Amy turned her head.

'There is no necessity to wait for a week,' she said, 'my mind is quite made up. I can never marry Mr. Dexter.'

'My dear girl,' persisted Mr. Fletcher, 'do not make up your mind so swiftly. No doubt my blunt way of putting the matter has pained you. I can see you are agitated. Let me plead for my nephew. His love for you is disinterested; he knows you but as a charming young lady who is at present occupying a position unworthy of her. He knows nothing of you whatever beyond that; judge then whether you are treating him quite fairly in refusing to listen to him. It is not so easy to find young men nowadays who are capable of displaying such disinterested earnestness and devotion in seeking for a wife. He tells me he is even ignorant of the name of your parents—does not that show he values you for yourself?'

Dexter had tried once or twice to interrupt his uncle, but in vain. However, he now managed to to interpose with:

'Really, uncle, you appear to imagine that—'

But he was interrupted in his turn by Amy.

'Did Mr. Dexter tell you he did not know who my father was?' she asked.

'Yes,' replied Mr. Fletcher, 'and I applauded the delicacy of feeling he showed.'

'I must tell you, then, that he did ask me, and seemed very surprised to hear his name. There seems to be some mystery about it, for its mention seems to have sufficed to turn Mr. Dexter from a casual acquaintance into an ardent admirer.'

Dexter stood abashed; he did not attempt to defend himself.

'So, sir,' said his uncle, severely, "It seems that you do know who this young lady is. I had my suspicions, and that is why I have said what I have, thinking I should catch you in your own trap.'

'I thought you would be pleased if I married her,' pleaded Dexter.

'Don't say another word, sir. Leave us now; come to my room this evening; I shall have something to say to you, then.'

Dexter walked away as carefully as he could.

'Come a little closer to me, my dear child,' said Mr. Fletcher in a tender tone, as soon as his nephew was out of sight. 'I have some news for you. You must think me a very strange old man—so I am, perhaps. You think I have been very rude and unkind, but it was for your sake. No one is near us now; put your arms around my neck and kiss me and call me grandpapa.'

Amy looked at him in astonishment for a minute and then glanced at Maitland. His look reassured her; she flung her arms around the old man's neck and kissed him.

'Grandpapa!' she claimed, 'is it true?'

'Yes, my darling. Ah, if I had only known it before! It's your fault, Maitland.'

'Are you quite sure?' he asked.

'Well, no; I suppose it's chiefly mine. Do you think, Amy, you will be able to love me for the few months I have to live?'

'Oh, don't talk of dying, grandpapa; you mustn't.'

'Ask Maitland.'

'What must I ask him?'

'If he can spare me a part of your affection for a time. Oh, I know all about it, you see; my eyes are not so dim yet but that I have seen more than either of you imagine. Take her, Maitland.'

Maitland did not hesitate long, for Amy's glad look revealed to him that her grandfather had judged her truly.—All the Year Around.

Vital Questions!!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to women"

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia; constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

Mandrake! or Dandelion!

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.

Women nearly gone crazy!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of Rheumatism.

Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!

Erysipelas!

Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact almost all diseases frail

Nature is heir to

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

Colonel Allen, who a short time since began boring for oil near Warfield, Ky., struck a vien of that liquid on the 17th inst. that will yield ten barrels per day. The oil was pronounced of excellent quality.

With Pen and Pencil.

"No, sir; I don't believe newspaper men are more dissipated than any other class of men who earn their living by their brains," said Mr. A. H. Siegfried, Manager of the Advertising Department of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, "still; those of them who do drink, w ch are tempted to stimulate, for it's very hard on the nerves and stomach."

"As for example?"

"As for example, in my own case. I stuck to my desk on this paper until my nerves were like a bunch of telegraph wires after a gale, and my stomach kept about as good time as a two-dollar watch. My friends exhorted this and the doctors advised that, but one day I caught up, in an 'ad.' of PARKER'S TONIC, and tried it. I have never endorsed a proprietary medicine before, but I shall depart from my rule and say that the Tonic is not merely the best thing but the only thing that brought up those attacks. All desk-workers should make use of it."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger; and as ginger is really an unimportant flavoring ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of HISCOX & CO. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

The next session of the North American sængerbund will hold its next sængerfest at Milwaukee, Wis., in 1886.

[illegible]AP Day's Soap

[illegible] of it are taxed to the utmost to supply the orders [illegible] entire country. Might here in your section it is [illegible] testify to its wonderful properties.

[illegible] can be used for smoothing the surface of your hand-irons, giving them a polish and smoothness, that will greatly assist in giving your clothes a finished look.

Remember this Soap is cheaper than any other in the market, and yet does all we claim for it.

THESE ARE SUBSTANTIAL TRUTHS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

Messrs. DAY & FRICK: Having used DAY's Soap for some months past as a disinfectant [illegible] having a second case in any house where [illegible] used [illegible] recommend it as a disinfectant [illegible]
CONSTANTINE HERING, M. D.,
112 North Twelfth Street.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., March 24, 1881.

Messrs. DAY & FRICK.
Dear Sirs:—I have used DAY's Soap with results that delighted not only myself but some of my neighbors who called to see it. I suffer much from catarrh [illegible] by the heat and steam of boiling clothes. Now, however, [illegible] I escape the evil effects of the steam from boiling suds. [illegible] and far less work, [illegible] any hard rubbing. Wash-day I have no discomfort, [illegible] your Soap [illegible] the washing for eight in my family for two weeks [illegible] whiter, sweeter and better than by any other process [illegible] I have abolished the wash-boiler, and shall use it no more. I deem your Soap to be by far the cheapest and best, and would feel it a hardship to be obliged to use any other.
Yours respectfully,
MRS. MARY C. ST. CLAIR.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11th, 1883.

Messrs. DAY & FRICK.
Gentlemen:—Having for several months used in our family "DAY's CREAM [illegible] Soap," and having, as we believed, tested it thoroughly, we do not [illegible] it superior to any Soap we have ever used. We therefore [illegible] recommend it to all who would save labor and time in performing the arduous duties of the household. We find this soap especially adapted [illegible] purposes, and fully entitled to the high claim made for it. No family can afford to be without it, and a fair trial, according to the directions, will confirm our opinion.
Very truly yours,
CHAS. H. THOMAS, Pastor of Frankford Avenue Baptist Church, Phila.

Save your Health,
Save your time,
Save your patience,
By using this Soap.
No unpleasant odor,
No sickness as the result of a hard day's wash,
No hot water,
No wash boiler,
but clothes clean and white and as fragrant as new mown hay.
TRY IT.

☞ Wash-day has no terrors for the household where DAY'S SOAP is used; no unpleasant and sickening odors to fill your houses, no laborious rubbing on the wash-board, while the washing can be done in one half the time necessary by following the old worn-out method.

MADAM—for it is to the ladies we desire to speak more especially—you are the interested person in this matter; you it is that suffers the ills arising from the wash-tub and its heavy cares; you it is to whom the perplexities and responsibilities of the household rightfully belong, and you it is that should interest yourself in a trial of the qualities of this soap, that has always proven itself to be a boon of salvation.

TO SUFFERING HUMANITY.

We do not come to you with a plausible story calculated to have you try it, simply for the amount of money such a sale would bring us; we do not come to you as irresponsible parties, who have no reputation to suffer calumny, but we do present to you this brand of soap upon an absolute guarantee and recommendation of a well known industrial establishment in Philadelphia, of sixteen years' existence. Do you suppose for a moment it would compensate us to make false statements to you and ruin our well-earned reputation? No, dear reader; what we say about DAY'S SOAP is the truth, and it is sustained by the evidences of thousands of housewives from all over the country; besides which we stand ready to endorse it all with ready cash. ☞ DAY'S SOAP is the Original and only Patented [illegible]

DAY'S SOAP { Will clean the Miners' Skin and Clothes. Will clean the Machinists' Skin and Clothes. Will clean the Mechanic's skin and Clothes. Will clean Everybody's Skin and Clothes.

Is there not economy in the use of soap that will clean the skin as well as the clothes? this Day's Soap will surely do. It will in no way injure the finest fabrics or the most delicate complexion.

No soda, no washing crystals, no lyes are to be used, but simply supply yourself for the next wash-day with a bar of DAY'S SOAP, then carefully read the directions and follow them to the exact letter, and if you don't say pitch out that old wash-boiler, for I am a wiser woman, you will be the first person we have yet heard of that has been disappointed.

☞ Now remember—If you don't intend to follow the directions do not try the soap at all, for, unless you do this you will be disappointed, and then you will scold us and yourself as well.

The cost of one cake will convince you that it is the best and cheapest soap ever offered you, while the smiles that will encircle your brow will do justice to a golden sunset.

Have you confidence in this newspaper? If so, do you suppose the owner would allow us to swindle his readers by offering them tempting inducements? He uses it in his own home, and can certify to its merits. Now you get a cake from your grocer in time for the next wash-day, and become acquainted with its intrinsic worth.

Ask your grocer for it, and do not allow him to put you off with anything else for a substitute, for every dealer can obtain it and should he refuse you, send direct to

DOWNS' ELIXIR.
N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable; the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz: Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of Affection of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs, then an inflammation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflammation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

CONSUMPTION

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but by removing the cause, generally cures the cough. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition, may be cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

"Perhaps it is," [illegible] "I do not ask for [illegible] Plead your own [illegible] during the next week, and then Amy shall give her reply."

Amy turned her head.

"There is no necessity to wait for a week," she said, "my mind is quite made up. I can never marry Mr. Dexter."

"My dear girl," persisted Mr. Fletcher, "do not make up your mind so swiftly. No doubt my blunt way of putting the matter has pained you. I can see you are agitated. Let me plead for my nephew. His love for you is disinterested; he knows you but as a charming young lady who is at present occupying a position unworthy of her. He knows nothing of you whatever beyond that; judge then whether you are treating him quite fairly in refusing to listen to him. It is not so easy to find young men nowadays who are capable of displaying such disinterested earnestness and devotion in seeking for a wife. He tells me he is even ignorant of the name of your parents—does not that show he values you for yourself?"

Dexter had tried once or twice to interrupt his uncle, but in vain. However, he now managed to to interpose with:

"Really, uncle, you appear to imagine that—"

But he was interrupted in his turn by Amy.

"Did Mr. Dexter tell you he did not know who my father was?" she asked.

"Yes," replied Mr. Fletcher, "and I applauded the delicacy of feeling he showed."

"I must tell you, then, that he did ask me, and seemed very surprised to hear his name. There seems to be some mystery about it, for its mention seems to have sufficed to turn Mr. Dexter from a casual acquaintance into an ardent admirer."

Dexter stood abashed; he did not attempt to defend himself.

"So, sir," said his uncle, severely, "it seems that you do know who this young lady is. I had my suspicions, and that is why I have said what I have, thinking I should catch you in your own trap."

"I thought you would be pleased if I married her," pleaded Dexter.

"Don't say another word, sir. Leave us now; come to my room this evening; I shall have something to say to you, then."

Dexter walked away as carefully as he could.

"Come a little closer to me, my dear child," said Mr. Fletcher in a tender tone, as soon as his nephew was out of sight. "I have some news for you. You must think me a very strange old man—so I am, perhaps. You think I have been very rude and unkind, but it was for your sake. No one is near us now; put your arms around my neck and kiss me and call me grandpapa."

Amy looked at him in astonishment for a minute and then glanced at Maitland. His look reassured her; she flung her arms around the old man's neck and kissed him.

"Grandpapa!" she claimed, "is it true?"

"Yes, my darling. Ah, if I had only known it before! It's your fault, Maitland."

"Are you quite sure?" he asked.

"Well, no; I suppose it's chiefly mine. Do you think, Amy, you will be able to love me for the few months I have to live?"

"Oh, don't talk of dying, grandpapa; you mustn't."

"Ask Maitland."

"What must I ask him?"

"If he can spare me a part of your affection for a time. Oh, I know all about it, you see; my eyes are not so dim yet but that I have seen more than either of you imagine. Take her, Maitland."

Maitland did not hesitate long, for Amy's glad look revealed to him that her grandfather had judged her truly.—All the Year Around.

Colonel Allen, who a short time since began boring for oil near Warfield, Ky., struck a vien of that liquid on the 17th inst, that will yield ten barrels per day. The oil was pronounced of excellent quality.

With Pen and Pencil.

"No, sir; I don't believe newspaper men are more dissipated than any other class of men who earn their living by their brains," said Mr. A. H. Siegfried, Manager of the Advertising Department of the St. Paul Pioneer-Press, "still, those of them who do drink are tempted to stimulate, for it's very hard on the nerves and stomach."

"As for example?"

"As for example, in my own case. I stuck to my desk on this paper until my nerves were like a bunch of telegraph wires after a gale, and my stomach kept about as good time as a two-dollar watch. My friends suggested this and the doctors advised that, but one day I caught on, so to speak, to Parker's Tonic, and tried it. I have never endorsed a proprietary medicine before, but I shall depart from my rule and say that the Tonic is not merely the best thing but the only thing that broke up those attacks. All desk-workers should make a note of it."

This preparation, which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of Parker's Tonic. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger; and as ginger is really an unimportant flavoring ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

The next session of the North American saengerbund will holds its next saengerfest at Milwaukee, Wis., in 1885.

Do you suppose for a moment it would compensate us to make false statements to you and ruin our well-earned reputation? MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
